

Management

man-ej; to oversee; to handle effectively; to be successful, achieve a goal.

Even a finger in the dike is a management response.

We do our best to not let it get that far.

We are unusual in our stewardship of client needs and resources. And we understand "appropriate and definitive responsive action."

We have a confession. We have worked successfully for a number of the world's most significant management consulting firms: McKinsey & Company Inc., A. T. Kearney, Booz-Allen & Hamilton, Inc., Deloitte Consulting Group to name but a few. They know how to keep a consultant on his/ her toes! And we are proud of having done multiple projects for each - that says something positive about us as well.

We successfully executed ten projects for Capitol Financial Group as they grew from 50 employees to over 350 in ten years. Many of those projects were in-place renovations and expansions which required delicate coordination with contiguous tenants, to say nothing of keeping the operation in business and minimizing or eliminating disruptions.

With external consultants and vendors for telephone, data hardware, data cabling, audio-visual equipment, branding and so on, at times, our role is that of a musical conductor, keeping every one on the right page, on the right note, playing at the same tempo.

"The difference is in the details and Eberhard Architects manages the details extremely well. I never had to worry that items would be missed, overlooked, or slip through the cracks. They kept many balls in the air at all times and juggled them efficiently and smoothly."

"They do whatever is necessary to meet the requirements of the client, whether it be a tight time line, a budget constraint, a business specific challenge, or simply a last minute curve in the road. I have personally handed them some last minute decisions and found they pull out all the stops to be responsive and helpful. Their first and last concern is for the client and the success of the project with 'success' being defined as whatever the client thinks is success. When I began my career in Facilities Management, my education and background had not been in this field, and I had limited knowledge and experience. They helped me to learn and to grow in my profession by doing whatever it took to make sure I understood all the nuances of an issue. I learned a great deal from them."
